Justice Alton Thomas Davis

Justice Davis will stand tall for every Michigan resident and will protect our rights as citizens. Justice Davis worked as a teacher in Detroit before getting his law degree from the Detroit College of Law. Davis worked in private practice in Northern Michigan before becoming a prosecutor where he put murders and sex offenders behind bars. In addition to his years as a prosecutor, Davis has spent 26 years as a judge. He has been praised by both Democrats and Republicans for his fairness and honesty. Justice Davis is leading the effort to streamline and reform Michigan's judicial system to increase efficiency to save dollars. He is also working to make sure that our justice system is accessible, affordable, and easy to navigate.

Judge Denise Langford Morris

Judge Denise Langford Morris has served on the Oakland County Circuit for 18 years, making her the longest-serving woman on the bench and the first African American to be elected county-wide in Oakland. Langford Morris put herself through Wayne State and law school at Detroit Mercy. She was appointed to the court by Governor Engler after working as an investigator for the state department of child protective services and then as a state and federal prosecutor where she has a record of putting murders and sex offenders behind bars. Langford Morris has a wealth of experience, having tried over fifty thousand cases including high-profile criminal cases and complex civil litigation. She says that the court has become unbalanced against the people of Michigan and she will use her 25 years of experience to return fairness, integrity, independence and compassion to the bench.
